The meeting between Mr. Rabin and Mr. Arafat will be on the third ... I asked Mr. Christopher to delay his mission and attend the signature of this declaration with us."

Christopher told reporters that "Some progress was made on the outstanding issues. What I myself found so impressive is the sense of urgency that both sides now have about reaching a conclusion. I've agreed to stay on until the third and the fourth to assist in whatever way we can. I'm very pleased that the parties have set the fourth as a target date."

Arafat said "We hope that ... next week there will be something concrete, something substantial, concrete on the ground that we can offer to our two peoples."

Communications Minister Shulamit Aloni said in Cairo that she has no problem with Palestinians using their own stamps, as did the Jews in Palestine during the period of the British Mandate.

Asked if the two sides might sign an agreement without resolving all the outstanding issues, a senior US official said: "There is a strong disposition among some in the process to make this as inclusive an agreement as possible."

Peres is expected to return to Israel this morning to participate in talks with Christopher.

In the Paris economic talks, issues concerning insurance have been resolved, an Israeli spokesman said yesterday.

Jordan, meanwhile, awaiting word from the US on moves to unblock the port of Akaba, which has been hurt by sanctions against Iraq, will send only one observer to regional arms control talks in Qatar, an official said yesterday.

SA vote extended by one day in some areas

JOHANNESBURG (Reuter) – President F.W. de Klerk announced yesterday a 24-hour extension of South Africa's first all-race elections in the Zulu heartland of KwaZulu and five other former homelands that had voting problems.

This meant the counting of ballots cast by an estimated 22.7 million eligible voters throughout the country was delayed by 24 hours to 6 a.m. on Saturday.

Africa's last white president said the Independent Electoral Commission (IEC) running the elections had sought the polling extension in KwaZulu, Transkei, Ciskei, Venda, Lebowa and GaZankulu.

"I would like to say that the IEC assured us that in some parts there are some places where people haven't been able to vote as yet," de Klerk told a news conference at his National Party headquarters in Pretoria.

Peres: Proposal to Damascus doesn't include full Golan withdrawal

DAVID MAKOVSKY

THE so-called "package" proposal that Jerusalem wants visiting Secretary of State Warren Christopher to convey to Damascus does not include a reference to full Israeli withdrawal from the Golan Heights, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday.

Christopher, who arrived last night after participating in Israel-PLO talks in Cairo, will hold his first of two meetings with Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin this morning at the Defense Ministry in Tel Aviv before meeting Peres.

Meanwhile, senior officials say Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin and Peres agreed the verbal package (without maps) they will give Christopher will include detailed demands for security arrangements on the Golan Heights, plus linkage between phases of withdrawal and normalization. These officials reject the idea that Rabin will put forward the idea of a "conditional" full withdrawal, namely a pullout from the entire plateau if all Israel's security demands are met.

Speaking in Cairo, Peres said, "I think Israel would not begin with the territorial end at the beginning of the negotiations. I don't think we have given any ... indications about the size [of Israeli withdrawal] because this should be part and parcel of negotiations.

"We have to consider all the issues, not just territory. We are serious. We want to make peace with Syria," Peres said.

While Christopher has sought to publicly dampen any prospects for a breakthrough, Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin disagreed with that approach. He told The Jerusalem Post last night. "If there is no breakthrough during this visit of the secretary of state, I don't see how 1994 will be the year of peace with Syria."

When asked to elaborate upon what he meant by a breakthrough, Beilin replied, "I mean either in terms of how the talks are held or what is being discussed."

Beilin said the Syrians should either upgrade the moribund Washington talks to the foreign minister level or else "the secretary of state should decide on genuine shuttle diplomacy."

In terms of the substantive breakthrough needed, Beilin said, "Israel has already given enough to warrant Israel-Syria talks on security arrangements. Syria should agree to this. We have to break out of this narrow equation of just territory and peace."

Israeli officials are upset the Syrians did not reciprocate Rabin's statement that he would uproot settlements on the Golan Heights with their own gesture. Rabin complained sharply about Assad's parsimonious style of negotiating during talks with Russian interlocutors in Moscow this week.

Chief negotiator for talks with Syria Itamar Rabinovich held preparatory talks late last night with US special coordinator for Middle East peace talks Dennis Ross.

Christopher is to fly to Damascus for talks tomorrow, before returning on Sunday. It remains unclear if Christopher will make a second trip to Damascus afterwards or stay in Jerusalem until returning to Cairo on Tuesday, in preparation for the expected Wednesday Israel-PLO signing ceremony.

Mr. Christopher...
YOU Have a Double Standard!

YOU know that Americans would never permit your placing their security and future in jeopardy or give up any part of their land.

YOU would not attempt to persuade them that they could rely on foreign troops to protect them against an avowed and outspoken enemy, if they would only allow that enemy to perch at their doorstep for the sake of a promised peace. Yet...

YOU would put pressure on the present Israeli government to make dangerous concessions, a government that doesn't even represent a majority of its People. A People which has all too recently emerged from a Holocaust, cannot be placed in a position where it can happen again here in its historic Land.

Shame on YOU Mr. Christopher, for leading this innocent lamb to slaughter.

Nearing an agreement

IT now seems almost certain that the Gaza/Jericho implementation agreement will be signed in Cairo on Wednesday. The date is still described as a "target" rather than a firm date and – as Foreign Minister Shimon Peres said yesterday – experience has shown that nothing is certain until the signatories actually put their names to the agreement.

But it is reasonable to suppose that US Secretary of State Warren Christopher, sorely in need of a diplomatic achievement, has added *the administration's weight to the proceed*ings, and that neither side will be able to resist his urgings to sign this week. Many details may still be left to later negotiations, but the Israeli withdrawal will undoubtedly begin within weeks, and the PLO will take over in Gaza and Jericho.

It is at this point that the real test of government policy will begin. Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin has repeatedly referred to the interim period of Palestinian self-rule as a trial of the PLO's intentions and the Palestinians' ability to live in peace with Israel.

Animating Israel's agreement with the PLO is the assumption that the majority of Palestinians have changed, that at least those represented by Yasser Arafat no longer seek Israel's destruction and are willing to live in peace with a sovereign Jewish state. If there is a Palestinian minority which still opposes this agreement, it will be quelled by Arafat and his army, who will be supported both by Israel and the international community.

Rabin himself seems uncertain about the validity of this assumption. During his Moscow visit, he admitted that Arafat's ability to deliver what is expected of him is still unproved. He may not be able to control all the elements of the Palestinian population in the territories, particularly in Gaza, Rabin said.

To add to the confusion and uncertainty, Chief of the General Staff Lt.-Gen. Ehud Barak told the Knesset foreign affairs and defense Committee on Wednesday that he believes the PLO and Hamas are "two facets of the same national movement, whose long-term goals as far as we are concerned are quite identical. Hamas may very well integrate in various frameworks in Gaza and Jericho – like schools, social orgauizations, mosques, and charitable institutions – but I wouldn't be surprised if another arm of Hamas continues with terrorist strikes."

Knesset members who heard Barak said they were puzzled by his statement. Indeed, if what he says is true, the main premise of Israel's agreement with the PLO must be considered false. Hamas has neither changed its strategic goals nor has any intention of changing them.

The latest communique of the organization, issued to counter "the misconceptions of the media," reiterates the Hamas catechisms: "The Palestinian resistance is to continue against the occupiers as long as they remain in Palestine and until the liberation of all the land from the sea to the river ... Palestine is an Islamic land that is not to be given up or negotiated on."

Nor is this just talk, as the almost daily terrorist attacks for which Hamas takes credit make obvious. If, as Barak says, the PLO shares Hamas's goals, the reports of its transformation into a peaceful political party are premature indeed.

This does not mean that the PLO will not try to keep the peace in the areas under its control. In fact, Barak expects that since the organization has an interest in proving it can maintain law and order in Gaza and Jericho, it will exert pressure on Hamas to cooperate. Such an arrangement, reflected in the 30-day pact recently signed by Fatah and Hamas, will allow the Islamic militants to kill at will inside Green Line Israel and the Israeli-controlled territories, while keeping the peace in Gaza and Jericho.

It is even doubtful that only Hamas will take part in terrorist activities. The division of labor is not so much a matter of letting Hamas do the dirty work while Fatah plays the peaceful negotiator. It is more a "credit taking" stratagem. Hamas simply assumes responsibility for every terrorist act, while Fatah enjoys the impunity the negotiations give it. It is now certain that the suicide bombing in Afula and the knifing attack on bus passengers in Jerusalem, for which Hamas took credit, were executed by members of Fatah.

Yesterday Peres said that now the PLO will show its ability to eliminate terrorism. All Israelis, regardless of what they think of the agreement, must hope that his words will prove prophetic. But they must also be prepared for a different scenario. It is all too possible that terrorism will increase, with the clear goal of accelerating Israel's withdrawal to the 1949 lines and the evacuation of all settlements. Even Israel's Arabs will be tempted to believe, not without reason, that Israel's exit from Gaza and Jercho, to be followed by withdrawal from the rest of the administered territories, is a sure sign that – contrary to all Israeli pronouncements in the past – terrorism pays.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

ANOTHER VIEW FROM ABU TOR

Sir, – I refer to your article of April 22 "On the border" written by a good friend, Jeff Green. No doubt Jeff represents one perspective on Abu Tor. There is another view that I think is worth revealing.

To begin with, we do not live in a "mixed neighborhood," as stated in your headline. As Jeff himself writes, "Jews live on the western slope and Arabs live on the eastern slope."

When Jeff says, "Their city is cut off from the rest of their country," it is hard to know what he means. Do they have a country other than Israel? If so, what is it? Jordan? Palestine? Syria? The Arabs of Abu Tor can visit their relatives whenever they desire, so long as they and their extended families have not brought upon themselves the curfews that are often imposed by the authorities.

As far as the Hebron massacre is concerned, I think that it has been made perfectly clear by many leaders on many occasions that that particular incident was an aberration of the Jewish tradition and not a reflection of it. We all sympathize with those neighbors who have lost relatives, and we condemn, unconditionally, their tragic end.

I would like to hear similar statements from our neighbors when we have fallen prey to Arab violence. It is just never forthcoming. Therefore, when "the vandals burn cars and slash tires in the neighborhood," and no condemnation is forthcoming from their leadership, we find it most difficult to believe that these actions are not encouraged by "our neighbors."

Jeff says that, "I see them walking through my neighborhood on their way to work." I know that if I would walk through their neighborhood on my way to work, I would not be made to feel very comfortable, or worse.

Jeff says, "The more we know about our neighbors, the harder it is to speak in generalizations about the Arabs." I am sorry to say that this is not my experience. While it is true that the Abu Tor Arabs can be found to be fine, upstanding individuals when taken on a one-on-one basis, as a group however, they are no different from their cousins in Hebron: for good and for bad.

Jeff states that Arab hostility is "a normal human response to actions taken by Israelis." Considering the history of the Arabs in Israel over the last 100 years, I find that remark simply without foundation.

DOUBLE STANDARD

Sir, – It is ironic that one of your writers took a shot at the BBC for the secondary attention it gave to the terrorist attack in Afula (Telereview, April 15), and yet the downing of the American helicopters over Iraq only rated a small, hardly noticeable piece on page A8 of your paper.

Your double standard toward the BBC is particularly glaring given that the 26 American and allied personnel who were tragically killed were serving in part to protect our safety. They deserved a more respectful tribute.

As an American and as an Israeli, I am deeply concerned by what happens in both Afula and Iraq, and I protest your journalistic hypocrisy.

KEREN DEWITT-ARAR

Kfar Vitkin.

REPUGNANT CRIES

Sir, – It is understandable that after such terrible crimes as those committed in Afula and Hadera, people should express their anger by condemning those who perpetrated the crimes. But they should not condemn an entire people. The cries of "Death to the Arabs" should not be heard in this country. Surely we Jews have had enough of being condemned for crimes committed by other Jews. We must not condemn the Arab people for the foul acts of terrorists.

Let us try and place the blame where it belongs. By all means cry out in anger, but let us change the cry to "Death to Hamas," or "Death to Fatah," or better still "Death to murderers," but never blame all the Arab people for the loathsome, repugnant and, in the long run, utterly senseless, atrocities of the few.

STANLEY A. BROZA

Tel Aviv.

ASTONISHING REMARK

Sir, – To add to the "festive" spirit of Independence Day this year, we were treated to the astonishing remark of Prime Minister Rabin that he is more committed to the security of Israeli citizens in Afula and Hadera that he is to the security of those in Elon Moreh and other parts of "the territories."

An American citizen knows that his government is pledged to ensure the security of his person and property wherever he may be, throughout the world; an Israeli citizen is privileged to know that his government is not fully committed to his security even if he resides in the Land of Israel.

No doubt this latest remark of Rabin will be added to his already distinguished catalog of brilliant remarks, such as his expression of willingness to endure a visa requirement for visiting Gush Etzion; or his infamous "we will break their bones" order. If an explanation be sought for why Israel finds itself in its current security predicament, it can be readily found in the wisdom repeatedly spouted forth by our senior government officials from the prime minister down.

Red carpet in Moscow

MOSHE ZAK

YITZHAK Rabin's mother immigrated from Russia and his father from the US – but this doesn't qualify the prime minister to mediate between Moscow and Washington on Middle East policy.

Still, President Boris Yeltsin was clearly pleased at Rabin's public recommendation of American-Russian cooperation in finding a Middle East settlement.

This is because today's Russia, unlike the previous incarnation, is working for peace and stability in the Middle East. It is also seeking recognition of its special status in the region, something Moscow invested tens of billions of dollars in during the era of the USSR.

The US, for its part, was not willing back then – and is probably just as unwilling today – to share its senior status in the Middle East with the Russians. It is reluctant to go beyond the kind of honorary role it accorded Moscow at the opening of the Geneva and Madrid conferences and at the signing ceremonies between Israel, the PLO and Jordan in Washington.

Russian diplomats, mostly trained in the Soviet Foreign Ministry, find it hard to forget the insult to Andrei Gromyko in 1974, when the Soviet foreign minister's plane was forced to circle in the air until Henry Kissinger's aircraft had taken off after he concluded the Israel-Syria disengagement agreement.

These diplomats do not want Russia pushed to the sidelines in the Israel-Arab negotiations, as happened after the Geneva Conference. Nor do they relish the role of passive extras in a performance which has only the Americans playing the lead role.

They want partnership, especially in the light of talks about American forces being stationed on the Golan in an Israeli-Syrian settlement. They also want Russian soldiers in that peacekeeping force.

The dividend Yeltsin reaped from Rabin's visit to Moscow this week was a large one: he was the object of a public Israeli recommendation, at the same time investing very little himself.

His proposals to Rabin were:

- Two – mutually incompatible – promises regarding Syria: To use its influence to get Damascus to soften its stand in the peace talks, and to announce that Russia would not sell Syria new weapons, only spare parts.

Such an announcement, when the Russian deputy prime minister is in Damascus signing a military pact, could offend President Hafez Assad and weaken Yeltsin's ability to influence him. Unless, that is, the Russian minister explained that behind the public pronouncements was an attempt to persuade Israel and the Americans to agree to Russian troops being stationed on the Golan – which would be to Syria's advantage.

- Yeltsin promised that Russia would not sell offensive arms to Iran, which makes it sound as though submarines, for example, are just toys, not offensive armaments. The assertion that the nuclear reactor Russia is supplying to Iran is only for power production is reminiscent of the French assurances about the reactor they provided Iraq in 1979-1980.
- Yeltsin's offers to sell weapons to Israel or sign a military and security cooperation agreement *with Jerusalem could earn re*newed respect from the Arabs, mainly Syria, for Russian weapons. If Israel, which receives considerable American military aid, is interested in such arms, that's a good sign. Moscow expects Israel to fill the role of a "sales agent" for Russian arms in the Middle East.

The US is still reluctant to share its superpower status in this region with Russia

RABIN, IT has to be assumed, will not endanger Israel's military and intelligence partnership with the US by accepting a Russian offer of cooperation. Intelligence does not take kindly to "bigamy," as was once pointed out to a Russian general who spoke in Jerusalem on the need for intelligence sharing between the IDF and the Russian Army.

In the 1950s, when Moscow was flooding the Arab countries with arms, signals were picked up in Jerusalem that Israel, too, could *get Soviet weapons. After exhaus*tive discussion, it was decided not to approach Moscow.

Before that decision was reached, Isser Harel, then Mossad chief, revealed that the Soviets had told the Egyptians they would "tempt Israel to turn to Moscow officially to acquire weapons only in order to refuse and expose Jerusalem as impotent."

But common sense prevailed in *Jerusalem. Later, when Washi*ton expressed displeasure at a port that Israel had approac Moscow for Soviet arms, B Gurion immediately denied report as unfounded.

Today, the US would not p test against such an Israeli mc But American arms produ would take umbrage at Israeli sources financing the Russ arms industry – for, after much of Israel's arms procu ment budget comes from the taxpayer.

One need only recall how tensely two major American n ufacturers competed to proc the next-generation warplane Israel.

Nobody is suggesting that Is show contempt for Russia. US also needs Moscow, espec in the UN context, as was n plain in the cases of Iraq and nia. The Russians did not star the way of the American milit use of the UN "umbrella."

'Blood on their hands' – what a joke

YORAM ARIDOR

FOREIGN Minister Shimon Peres tells us that during his meeting in Romania with Yasser Arafat last weekend, the PLO chairman understood that terrorists "with blood on their hands" would not now be released from prison.

Yet making a distinction between the PLO leader – who has personally dispatched hundreds of murderers to commit thousands of murders – and the murderers themselves lacks juridical basis. More than that, it betrays moral collapse.

The use of the formula "blood on their hands" as a moral scale to define "who is a murderer" is simply out of another world.

There is no difference between someone who kills another human being with his own hands and the man who sends him out to do it.

But Arafat is our peace partner, and it was necessary to seek moral justification for negotiating with him. It couldn't be proved that he has ever actually killed anyone himself – which is how the Israeli delegation to the talks came to demand that no person on the PLO side "with blood on his hands" be permitted to participate.

This hoax combines obtuseness with ignorance. With such a criterion applied after World War II, Adolf Eichmann would have been found innocent, since it was never proven that he personally killed a single Jew. Though he never soiled his hands with blood, he sent millions of Jews to their deaths.

Frenchman Paul Touvier, intelligence chief of the Vichy government, has just been convicted of murdering seven Jews during the Nazi era. It was a crime against humanity. But he too had no "blood on his hands." He "only" ordered that the Jews be killed.

Israel's position was that Touvier had to be tried, even 50 years after the event. There is no statute of limitations on his crime, no acceptable excuse. We did not let the French forgive him.

But Arafat is different. He is a patriot and peace partner.

Eichmann, Touvier, Arafat – all murderers. Only Arafat's a peace partner too

FROM A political viewpoint, it is clear that the PLO leader cannot abandon his messengers of death. He will not be able to establish his rule in Gaza and Jericho as long as Fatah members are in jail – and that includes actual murderers.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin will act like defense minister Rabin did in the 1985 prisoner exchange deal with Ahmed Jibril. A little later on, he will free murderers who have "blood on their hands" too.

If morality is not absolute, are we achieving by not rel "real" murderers yet? Arafa against us is no less than vier's; the only difference i Touvier has no negotiating ners or advocates in the I government.

The Roman governor P Pilate sentenced Jesus to Then, according to the New ment, he washed his hands said: I am cleared of the blo this righteous one. Later, a distortion transferred the for Jesus's murder from Pil the Jews, accompanying ar couraging their persec throughout history.

A crime against human measurable not by the num people murdered but by the tion of the murderers, as the vier case made clear. It is no sured by the ludicrous "blo their hands" standard, a Eichmann trial proved.

Satan is satan not becau has blood on his hands, b cause his emissaries do.

TALK ABOUT a hot potato: a cook in Oporto, Portugal, was pulling spuds out a sack. He put his hand on a nice big firm one that turned out to be a live hand grenade.

Only luck and the cook's light touch kept the pin intact when the grenade was removed from the crowded cafe's kitchen.

The grenade was aged and crusted with soil, but it was ready to blow.

Police have ruled out foul play. Their theory is the grenade was inadvertently plowed up and sacked in southern France, where the potatoes were from.

HAIFA NEWSHOUND Carl Alpert sent us a selection of items he gleaned from various sources. Among them:

- A brothel and a dance school, situated next door to each other, went to court with one demanding the other be required to move. But it is not as one would think: the brothel is the one complaining about the dance school.

According to the Australian Jewish News, Sefra Burstin, who owns the school, said she and the parents of her students had no qualms about the activities of the whorehouse. She said it posed no threat or disruption to her business.

But brothel managers Sandie Wiley and Lottie Peters said the school should relocate, explaining that they were concerned for the moral welfare of the young dancers, and that it was wrong for the students to see what goes on in a brothel.

- Sylvan Schwab, the director of the East Maui Animal Refuge in Hawaii, told a reporter for the Jewish Bulletin of Northern California that one of the boars "has been biting so many people we had to clip her tusks. For a while, we had the only pig who eats Jews."

- A clever ad appeared in the Atlanta Jewish Times, under the headline "KOSHER MEET MARKET." It was not misspelled; it's promoting a matchmaking outfit. Their motto: "The perfect choice for the Chosen Ones."

The battle for Soviet Jews

YISRAEL MEDAD

ON Saturday, May 2, 1964, the New York Times carried a story on page 16, sandwiched between one on the US and Castro, another on West and East Germany and a report on the Czech economic slump. It was headlined: "Soviet UN mission is picketed by 700 over anti-semitism."

I kept that old newspaper clipping, because those lines marked a historic beginning both for Soviet Jews and for the Jewish youth of the free world.

The day before, I was among 1,000 high-school and university students who marched along the sidewalk. Circling without stop, for that was what the law demanded. One block away, across Lexington Avenue and down 67th Street, was the location of Russia's UN mission building. We walked around and around for some four hours and would have continued, had it not been for the onset of Shabbat.

It was appropriate that May Day, a Soviet holiday, was chosen for the initiative in what would turn out to be one of the most successful human rights campaigns of the century. It was waged against the cruelest and most dictatorial regime, excluding Hitler's Nazi Germany. At the same time, it battled the forced ignorance and even apathy of most of the people we were trying to save. Eventually, those of us who marched that day would see hundreds of thousands of Jews leave the socialist homeland.

That May 1, 30 years ago, marked the first public demonstration in support of Soviet Jews, of their right to unrestricted religious practice and freedom of culture. Most important, it supported their right to emigrate.

The marching and demonstrating would continue over the years. We participated in pickets, maintained all-night vigils. We even sat in at various Soviet offices, disrupting normalcy.

We disturbed dance performances and sent food and matza packages. We fasted and held festive celebrations. We mourned our failures. We ran off many thousands of reams of fliers; pasted up posters, handed out leaflets, phoned in press releases and mailed letters and telegrams. We met and discussed, debated, deliberated and argued. We exchanged ideas. We thought of new tactics and forged unique alliances among Jews and Gentiles.

In the beginning, 1,000 young people marched, I among them. It was to be a long, uphill struggle. But we won

We telephoned and we visited and convened in Brussels. We smuggled items into Russia and sneaked others out. Some of us even learned Russian.

To our chagrin, we faced two major obstacles in those early years: the American Jewish establishment and Israel's Foreign Ministry. We overcame them as well. We learned to be bold and cheeky, fired by the enthusiasm of youth.

MY OWN involvement started in the late fall of 1963, when I attended a public meeting of the International Center for the Repatriation of Russian Jewry in midtown Manhattan.

Later, the following spring, I sat in on a planning session of the newly formed Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry at Columbia University. Those most responsible for taking the campaign out from behind the scenes were Yaakov Birnbaum, Glenn Richter and Morris Brafman. They were the most outstanding of many.

In 1968, we were electrified when Yasha Kazakov and Dov Shperling arrived in the US, even though, on one memorable occasion, they were barred from attending an establishment meeting, on account of the then official American Jewish policy of "quiet diplomacy." Later, more Russians, like Boris Kochublevsky, toured the country. We became international and networked with the 35s Women's Campaign in England, founded by Barbara Oberman and others.

The Union of Councils sprang up. The Zionist youth movements proved to be the surest recruiting ground. Rabbi Shlomo Carlebach's immortal Am Yisrael Hai song was introduced to an ecstatic crowd of thousands in a shut-off New York street during the Succot intermediate days in 1968.

With leaders pointing the way, two generations of Jewish youth passed through the gates of activism. We shouted and sang and danced and went to jail. We organized our campuses, and our neighborhoods, our synagogues, or federations and community centers.

We won. We defeated the Soviet Union. Judaism and Zionism outlasted Soviet Communism. We beat 60 years of subjugation, physical and spiritual. We overcame the effects of the Yevsektsia (Jewish informers), the NKVD, the KGB. We overcame, too, the Jewish "shushers," who urged quiet diplomacy.

It was an uphill struggle all the way, often against the press, the diplomats, the politicians, the establishment figures, the mavericks in our midst and, at times, the Israeli government.

For some Soviet Jews, we were undoubtedly too late, too slow. From them I ask forgiveness. For others who to this day do not know what Judaism is about, I am sorry that we didn't have the strength to encompass all that needed to be done on behalf of Soviet Jewry: Hebrew lessons, Bible studies, cultural seminars.

As for those who "dropped out" along the way or left Israel after immigrating, they still have to deal with Jewish fate. They still have to keep their religion, culture and heritage alive.

There is much to look back on over these 30 years. But there is still more to accomplish.

An embarrassment of riches

NETTY C. GROSS

UNTIL recently, M. resided in a 35-room estate set on eight acres in Lawrence, Long Island. She didn't come to Israel for Pessah this year. Her husband filed for bankruptcy. It was doubtful whether the $20 million he borrowed from "some" bank, somewhere in the US, would be repaid, and M. herself remained holed up bravely, like the Duchess of Malfi, in the Doral Hotel in Miami Beach.

Part eshet hayil, part Joan Collins, M. was missed at Jerusalem's Great Synagogue where her fabled outfits once provided respite from prolonged cantorial arias; and she was undoubtedly missed at the King David Hotel, where the deployment of her luggage could have passed for an emergency evacuation of a Louis Vuitton warehouse.

In a community of conspicuous consumers, M. topped everyone. This was the woman who used to buy a seat on the Long Island Railroad for her hat; who, in a thrall of supervising the loading of her luggage after a Pessah holiday spent in Grossinger's, once forgot her baby in the lobby; who redecorated a Manhattan hotel ballroom (cost: $250,000) for a daughter's wedding.

I recall once seeing M. at a charity ballet in Manhattan. It was hard not to notice. She was clad in a leopard coat and hat. Leopard shoes. She was a one-woman safari.

In truth, M.'s rise and fall may be a paradigm for Lawrence itself. Founded in the 17th century by an Englishman, Lawrence was once a WASPY enclave of estates. Wealthy Jewish garment-center types ("shmatte kings") moved in in the early 1940s, when the majestic synagogues were erected.

In the early 1970s, "frum" young suburban professionals from Queens and Brooklyn ("fruppies"?), many of them the children of Holocaust survivors, converged upon Lawrence. Steeped in history and elitism, Lawrence gave them an identity they lacked. They purchased homes with amenities like servants' quarters, colonial pillars, bay windows, back stairwells. Wealthy and religious, these "fruppies" set out to remake themselves and Lawrence.

Lawrence, where the livin' is easy/ Folks're buying/And the stakes are high

Today Lawrence has become something of an enigma.

Picture The Bonfire of the Vanities crossed with the Shulhan Aruch. According to its detractors, Lawrence's obsession with living has violated all accepted norms of behavior. Forget mundane bankruptcies. The naysayers maintain that the "fruppies" of Lawrence have come to view white-collar crime like volleyball. As long as no one "heimish" gets hurt, it's okay. The result is that you are as respectable as your latest Jaguar.

EVENTS REACHED their nadir a decade ago, when two Orthodox Lawrence brothers-in-law, who headed a multimillion-dollar firm called OPM (Other People's Money), were later sentenced to five- and 10-year jail terms, along with half a dozen other Lawrencian "fruppies." They had swindled a quarter of a billion dollars. Among the many donations creditors blocked were the $10m. OPM had pledged to Yeshiva University.

The stereotype of Lawrence as a toxic embarrassment of riches hurts. Lawrence kids, in whose lexicon terms like "indictment" and "bankrupt" mingle freely with "housekeeper" and "Anne Taylor," say they are routinely and unfairly held up as the epitome of indulgence.

One high-school graduate embarked on a year of study in Israel told me that she and her classmates had been snubbed by at least two Jerusalem all-women's institutions of higher learning merely because they came from Lawrence.

A Lawrence rabbi who conducts phone-a-thons in order to garner support for the nouveau-bankrupt/indicted/in-trouble and also arranges (via a charitable group called the Aleph Society) Talmud study sessions and kosher food for the jail-bound, told me that the role of the "community" in the event of a member's bankruptcy – or worse, arrest – remains ambiguous.

The rabbis are forced to ponder questions they never considered while studying for ordination. For example: Is a disbarred attorney under indictment for stealing his clients' escrow accounts entitled to be called up to the Tora in synagogue? And what about a repeatedly jailed slum landlord who throws a kiddush to celebrate his latest release from jail?

The sad truth is that there is no great moral debate going on in Lawrence, and it's not because of diffidence. Whether some fallen "fruppie" angel is "rehabilitated" in the eyes of the "community" or not depends largely on Lawrence's almost kabbalistic spin on Bonfire: If you've lost your money, God hates you. If you made your money back, God has forgiven you, ergo loves you. If God forgives/loves you, then who are they, mere Lawrencians, to hate you?

All this bodes well for M. She may come back to Lawrence yet. Her estate, once owned by an Orthodox Jew who did time for embezzlement, will undoubtedly be claimed by creditors. But as far as her community is concerned, the jury is out until the bottom line is in.

Permanent liquidators for Carmel Carpets appointed

GALIT LIPKIS BECK

ATTORNEY Yosef Cohen and accountant Ovadia Blass were appointed permanent liquidators to the Carmel Carpets conglomerate by Tel Aviv District Court yesterday.

Judge Yeshai Levit's ruling came as a surprise to state prosecutor Alona Baumgarten and Carmel Carpets workers' representative Galila Hornstein. Baumgarten and Hornstein had asked the court to appoint attorney Eli Zohar and accountant Ami Halaby as permanent liquidators to Carmel Carpets' six companies previously owned by MK Avraham Shapira.

"I currently find it difficult to appoint attorney Zohar to the position of liquidator. I appreciate Zohar's talents and find him definitely suitable for the available position but pending against him, together with others, is a charge sheet which I do not want to detail here. I see this as a good enough reason to search for another candidate," said Levit.

The charge sheet, which concerns the public company Consortium, accuses Zohar of fraud, breach of company trust and managerial offenses. At the court hearing, the state prosecutor emphasized that Zohar is innocent until proved guilty.

Levit's decision to appoint Blass was mainly due to Blass's familiarity with the Carmel Carpets case. Blass had reviewed Carmel Carpet's books for wrongdoing as far back as seven years prior to the conglomerate's collapse.

"It seems to me, that in this situation, and considering that accountant Blass has already conducted a number of investigations in the past at the request of the official receiver, it seems more appropriate to appoint accountant Blass as one of the liquidators," ruled Levit.

The permanent liquidators will oversee the investigation into Carmel's collapse. Previous investigations into the collapse have raised suspicions of criminal offenses.

Following the judge's ruling, Cohen said: "I first have to check out, confirm and investigate procedures taken so far. I don't know what I am going to do yet. There is only one thing I am sure of. It looks like I will have to spend much time studying the information."

Cohen said his investigation into the collapse will be very thorough and will go back to the period when Carmel Carpets was founded.

A source close to the investigation emphasized that the Carmel Carpets case may involve legal claims against the conglomerate's past managers, including MK Avraham Shapira who head's the United Tora Judaism list. The source said government representatives will also be investigated, including the Israel Foreign Trade Risk Insurance Company, the Income Tax Authority and the banks.

Elite's 1993 profits fall 54%

RACHEL NEIMAN

ELITE'S net profits plunged 54 percent last year to NIS 18 million compared to NIS 39.4m. in 1992, the company announced yesterday.

Most of the loss was in the first half of the year. The company experienced a rise of some NIS 11m. in earnings during the third and fourth quarters of 1993, compared with NIS 7m. for the same period last year.

Board chairman David Federman stated that "We are pleased with the results for the second half of 1993 and hope that the trend towards improvement in profits will continue in 1994."

Total sales turnover was some NIS 1.45 billion in 1993, a 58% increase from last year's NIS 0.9b. Sales turnover for Israel alone came to NIS 744m. compared with NIS 726 in 1992.

The company has redoubled its export activities, particularly to Eastern Europe, where it is presently examining possibilities for manufacture and marketing.

Total 1993 exports were 56% higher, rising to $36.7m. compared with $23.5m. in 1992.

Elite's 1993 figures include overseas subsidiaries Excella and Union. Excella was included in 1992's statement only from the start of the third quarter and Union from the start of the fourth quarter.

Elite's foreign companies experienced a sales turnover of NIS 709m. in 1993.

Along with the chocolate, candies, coffee, and snacks that have made it a household name, Elite has expanded its activities in recent years into the areas of communications and land development.

The company has over 3,500 employees in 10 countries.

Swissair profits plunge by 48%

NEIL COHEN
ZURICH

EUROPEAN liberalization towards a genuinely open air transport market remains no more than a much mouthed platitude, Swissair chairman Dr. Hannes Goetz said yesterday.

Speaking at a press conference to review the Swiss national carrier's 1993 results, Goetz also lamented the Swiss electorate's decision to reject membership in the European Economic Area, saying this too had hindered Swissair's access to new routes. Goetz said that following the breakdown of negotiations on the Alcazar alliance with KLM, SAS and Austrian Airlines, Swissair would have to become part of a global network, as the airline industry consolidates and becomes increasingly competitive.

The Swissair Group earned net profits of SFr 59 million last year, down 48 percent on the SFr 113m. profit achieved in 1992. Revenues rose 3% to SFr 6.4 .illion from SFr 6.2b. the previous year.

The airline reported a decline in profits to SFr 7m. from SFr 21m. in 1992. Both the group and the airline's results were flattered by profits on the sale of 10 MD-81 aircraft.

Swissair's load factor (how full its planes were) rose to 64.9% but yields (revenue generated per seat) fell by 7.9%. In addition, flight operations again lost money. Swissair's European short-haul subsidiary, Crossair, reported profits sharply higher at SFr 24 million versus SFr 1m. in 1992. However, Balair-CTA, the charter subsidiary, lost SFr 17.6m.

US economy grows 2.6% in first quarter

WASHINGTON (AP) — The US economy grew at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the first three months of the year, considerably less than half the booming pace that closed out 1993, the government said yesterday.

The advance in the gross domestic product, the total of all goods and services produced in the US, was less than most economists estimated.

The Commerce Department report reflected a previously announced decline in net exports, a slackening of the pace in housing and business construction, the effects of the severe winter in much of the nation and the California earthquake in January.

The economy had expanded in the final three months of 1993 at a sizzling 7% annual rate, the highest since the start of 1984. For all of last year, the GDP rose 3%.

The Commerce Department also reported that factory orders for big-ticket goods rose a mere 0.4% in March.

Meanwhile, the Labor Department said the number of Americans filing first-time claims for jobless benefits fell by 31,000 to 333,000 last week.

Russia: We've agreed to supply oil, natural gas to Israel

MOSCOW (AP) — Russia signed a tentative agreement this week to supply oil and natural gas to Israel, Russian officials said yesterday.

The framework agreement, reached during a four-day visit by Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin, was signed by the Russian and Israeli Energy ministries.

It provides for Russia to supply Israel with 2 million metric tons (14 million barrels) of crude oil a year over a 10-year period with annual payment in advance, according to Sergei Slesaryev, spokesman for the Russian Fuel and Energy Ministry.

The agreement also envisages Russian shipments of 5-10 billion cubic meters (175-350 billion cubic feet) of natural gas a year.

It was not clear when a final agreement might be signed.

Jose Rosenfeld adds:

Energy Minister Moshe Shahal refused to comment on the accord.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

IEC approves employee bonuses: The board of directors of the Israel Electric Corp. yesterday approved the distribution of NIS 30 million in bonuses to workers.

The bonus amounts to about 10% of the concern's net profits for 1993 which reached about NIS 300m.

Yeda Computers has recovered from last year's down swing, marking a 62% rise in net profits, from NIS 1,315,000 in 1992 to NIS 2,125,000 in 1993.

New TASE appointee: Yehuda Orbach has been appointed vice president and director of the Membership and Supervision Department of the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. He will be taking over from Yehuda Motro who served in the position for seven years.

WORLD BRIEFS

GM earnings up 66%: General Motors yesterday reported its earnings jumped 66 percent to $854 million in the first quarter, and said its North American operations were improving and cost-cutting was working.

The nation's biggest automaker earned 81 cents a share in the first three months of the year, compared with $513.2m., or 42 cents a share, a year ago. AP

Delta to cut 20% of work force: Delta Air Lines will eliminate up to 15,000 jobs or 20 percent of its work force in a restructuring aimed at slashing costs to compete more effectively against low-fare rivals, the carrier said yesterday.

The restructuring, to be completed over three years, is aimed at saving the third-largest US airline about $2 billion annually. It was announced as the airline announced it lost nearly $80 million in the first three months of 1994. AP

Air France posts losses: Air France lost $148 million in 1993, about $175m. more than previously estimated. The disclosures yesterday by the state-owned carrier follow recent employee approval of a cost-cutting plan to stem losses of $2.31 billion since 1990. AP

Samsung chooses Nissan as partner: South Korea's largest conglomerate, Samsung, announced yesterday it has chosen Nissan Motor Co. of Japan as its partner in an attempt to move into the nation's fast-growing auto industry. Samsung's technological tie-up with Nissan is subject to government approval. AP

Bundesbank keeps rates unchanged: The Bundesbank left official rates unchanged at its council meeting yesterday, but a number of European central banks took advantage of the German central bank's recent rate reductions to cut domestic rates. Few had expected the German central bank to sanction a second successive reduction in the discount and Lombard rates. Reuter

Paz buys majority of Sahar

GALIT LIPKIS BECK

PAZ Oil yesterday announced the purchase of more than 75 percent of Sahar Development & Investment after negotiations to sell the company to an investor group headed by Granit Hacarmel Investments fell through.

In a statement to the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange yesterday, Alton, a Dutch company controlled by the Lieberman family, announced the agreement to sell 78.68% of its shares in Sahar to Paz, also controlled by the Lieberman family. Sahar was valued at $70 million (100% of the company).

Sahar, a public company traded on the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange, is engaged in development of real estate. The company's assets are valued at about $150m. Paz's purchase of Sahar will increase the value of its real estate property to approximately $200m., in addition to fuel stations and industrial plants.

"The purchase of control in this company [Sahar] will enable Paz to efficiently manage, through a professional body, Paz's real estate ..." said Avraham Bigger, managing director of Paz.

COMMENTS: Veteran US human rights campaigner Rev. Jesse Jackson said the new SA would be an attractive place to invest in, because it could contribute significantly towards the economic development of Southern Africa.
Jackson said the US government was repositioning itself to support the new SA. He said resources would be mobilised for SA's development.
He said the new SA would be an attractive place for the US, Japan and others to invest in.
He added that attempts to sabotage the elections would be fruitless. He said his impression was that there was a 'crusade for change' in SA.

TEL AVIV STOCK MARKET

ANDRE LUMBROSO

Two-Sided Index	Maof index	Karam Index
220.53 +1.23%	216.72 +1.60%	264.00 +0.90%

TRADERS were all smiles yesterday on the floor of the Tel Aviv Stock Exchange. The Two-Sided index rose by 1.2%, the Maof by 1.6% and the Karam by 0.9%. Total turnover remained relatively low at NIS 240 million.

As in previous days, the major actors were the portfolio managers who were simply buying. The mutual funds industry was largely in neutral, neither buying nor selling, although there was some buying by the general public.

Traders were divided as to whether the rises are temporary or a sign that the market is returning to bullish ways.

Greater optimism as to economic growth has led investors to concentrate on large industrial concerns or large corporations likely to be carried away by the general growth of the economy. Koor was up 4% on a turnover of NIS 8.7 million. Discount Investment up 3.8% on a turnover of NIS 7 million; Clal Electronics up 3%; and Petrochemicals up 4.5%.

The shares which had been getting investors all worked up were amazingly subdued. Meir Ezra dropped 1.5%. T-Bone Veal was down 4.5%. Isramco declined 1.4%. Magen 5 continued on its downward slide, declining 6.5% to 18052 and bringing its cumulative decline for the month of April to 63%.

One share to follow: Israel Chemicals rose yesterday by 1.6% to 256. It had been issued in February 1992 at 240. Anybody who bought the share at the issue made 6.7% in two years and two months. During the same time, the consumer price index rose by more than 20% and the Two-Sided by close to 120%. Now the company is starting a major campaign to improve its image on the market, inviting, American style, analysts and brokers for a presentation which emphasizes the company's plans for the future, particularly its plans to enter the field of fine chemicals and pharmaceuticals.

FTSE down 20 points

WORLD MARKET ROUNDUP

LONDON (Reuter) – Equities went into reverse in the final two hours of trade as a weak Wall Street unsettled market confidence, dealers and analysts said.

At the close the FTSE 100 index was down 20.1 points to 3,129.9 after an earlier high of 3,167.3. The FTSE Mid-250 index managed to advance 3.5 points to 3,3797.4. The June FTSE futures contract was down 30.0 points to 3,123.0. Trading volume was around 750 million shares.

"I really am perplexed. It is very confusing indeed. One minute we're up, the next, down. OK, Wall Street did the damage but that really doesn't explain things," one dealer said.

FRANKFURT (Reuter) - The 30-share DAX index ended yesterday's session little changed but this masked the swing from the sector-led gains of recent days to individual price changes, dealers said.

Dealers said the market ran out of steam as supportive demand for Daimler and chemicals began to ease and financial issues slipped. Investors are also holding off to gauge debt markets' reactions to first-quarter US gross domestic product data.

The DAX index ended at 2,251.22, down 0.1 percent or 2.35 points on the day. Traders expect the index to hover around the 2,250 level but said the market is increasingly fragile.

They noted that investors are swapping positions within sectors, pointing to gains at BMW, up DM 15 at 895, and losses at VW, down DM 0.80 at 523.70.

Dealers said VW has come under increasing pressure from worries about the case against its purchasing manager Jose Ignacio Lopez Arriortua.

The early bourse session was marked by heavy demand for chemicals on the back of BASF's positive first-quarter results and its bullish outlook for 1994, which echoed forecasts this week from Hoechst and Bayer.

BASF ended 3.20 marks higher at 337.90, while Hoechst held its recent gains to end at DM 356.50, up 1.50.

PARIS - French shares finished firm but off their highs despite the Bank of France earlier shaving a further 10 basis points off its intervention rate to 5.70%. Although easing was expected, the market ticked up, but retraced after US bonds and Wall Street weakened in response to data indicating the US recovery might be weaker. The CAC-40 index closed up 2.93, or 0.14%, at 2,150.25.

TOKYO - Lack of fresh incentives and the upcoming Golden Week public holidays made Tokyo stocks end little changed in very sluggish trade on Thursday, brokers said.

There was sporadic arbitrage-linked selling, but such sales were absorbed by investment trusts' buying, they said.

"We virtually had a day off today. Only holiday plans were in people's minds," a broker at foreign securities firm said.

The Tokyo Stock Exchange will be closed on Friday. It will reopen on Monday and then close on May 3, 4 and 5.

The Nikkei average closed down 3.90 points or 0.02% at 19,725.25.

Dow falls sharply

WALL STREET WEEK

NEW YORK (AP) — Stocks fell sharply yesterday, as plunging bond prices sent interest rates soaring.

Good earnings reports from some companies were outweighed by fears that rising interest rates will choke off the economic recovery and bite into corporate earnings.

Stocks and bonds began the day in positive territory after a Commerce Department report said the US gross domestic product grew at a moderate 2.6 percent annual rate in the first three months of the year, slower than the expected 3.2%. That was initially positive for bonds because it indicated that economic growth is not fast enough to pose much of an inflation problem.

But as analysts combed through that and other economic reports yesterday morning, they found that an inflation index tied to the GDP rose at an annual rate of 2.6% in the first quarter, the biggest increase since the first quarter of 1993. That figure sent bond prices skidding.

Bond losses steepened after a Treasury auction of 5-year notes was poorly received.

Late in the day, the price of the 30-year US government bond was off $S per $1,000 face value. Its yield stood at 7.26%, up from 7.1% on Tuesday.

The Dow opened slightly higher but then quickly fell as bonds lost ground, declining more than 41 points before paring its losses near the close.

Oil stocks fell following a drop in oil prices. Airline stocks rose, assisted by Delta, which jumped after the company said it will lay off up to 15,000 jobs or 20% of its workforce.

Technology stocks fell as investors took profits. IBM retreated after The Wall Street Journal reported that the computer giant was behind schedule in firing 28,000 people, a goal it set last July.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 31.23 to 3,668.31.

Declining issue outnumbered advancers by about 4 to 3 on the New York Stock Exchange, with 941 up, 1,277 down and 598 unchanged.

Big Board volume totaled 323.14 million shares as of 4 p.m. (2000 GMT), against 287.99 million in the previous session.

CIA's Ames gets life sentence for spying

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) – Aldrich Ames, the highest ranking CIA employee ever caught spying, pleaded guilty yesterday to espionage and tax evasion charges and was sentenced to life in prison, his lawyer said.

Attorney Plato Cacheris also said Ames' wife, Rosario, pleaded guilty to lesser charges. He said her sentencing was delayed until early August.

"I bitterly regret the catastrophe which my betrayal of trust has brought upon my wife and son," Ames said in a brief statement after his sentencing in federal court.

In the courtroom, Ames said that he told his Colombian-born wife nothing of his spying activities for Moscow "for seven-and-a-half of the nine years of my criminal activity."

He said she learned of his spying "through my careless mistake," and that she "pleaded with me to break off the relationship with the Russians."

The Ameses signed an agreement with the government in advance of yesterday's hearing under which both consented to guilty pleas in lieu of a trial. To obtain the pleas, prosecutors zeroed in on the couple's concern for the welfare of their five-year-old son, Paul, who is living in Colombia with his mother's family.

Under the agreement, Aldrich Ames accepted a life sentence with no chance of parole and pledged to cooperate with federal investigators seeking to uncover the extent of any damage to US security interests. In exchange, Rosario Ames was seen as likely to be sentenced to five years in federal prison.

Mrs. Ames pleaded guilty to conspiracy to commit espionage and to tax evasion. She did not admit passing CIA documents to the Soviets, Justice Department spokesman John Russell said.

CIA Director R. James Woolsey, in remarks yesterday morning to reporters, said a guilty plea by the Ameses would enable the agency to accelerate its efforts to assess how much damage the nearly decade-long spying did to US national security.

Woolsey said the CIA's damage assessment up to now had been restricted by the Justice Department out of concern that the prosecution not be endangered.

Ames said his spying "is still not entirely explicable even to me."

He said he accepted an offer of $2 million from Soviet and then Russian intelligence agencies because he felt the espionage business had become "a self-serving sham."

"Frankly, these spy wars are a sideshow which have had no real impact on our significant security interests over the years," Ames said.

Nixon remembered for more than Watergate

Clinton delivers main eulogy

YORBA LINDA, Calif. (AP) – Twenty years after resigning the US presidency in disgrace, Richard M. Nixon was eulogized for his leadership by a president who once bitterly opposed his policies – Bill Clinton.

In an irony of history, President Clinton was the most prominent speaker as 2,000 mourners – including four other American presidents – bid farewell to Nixon at an outdoor funeral within sight of the home where he was born.

Nixon died Friday at 81 following a stroke. He was buried next to his wife Pat, who died last year of lung cancer.

"Oh yes, he knew great controversy amid defeat as well as victory," Clinton said in a eulogy delivered beside Nixon's flag-draped casket. "He made mistakes and they, like his accomplishments, are part of his life and record.

"But the enduring lesson of Richard Nixon is that he never gave up being part of the action and passion of his times," said Clinton, who as a young man opposed and worked against Nixon's Vietnam War policies.

Clinton looked beyond the Watergate scandal that drove Nixon from office. "May the day of judging President Nixon on anything but his entire life come to a close," Clinton said.

Clinton said he had valued Nixon's judgment and advice. He said that based on a phone call and a letter he had received a month before Nixon's stroke, "I can say his spirit was very much alive to the very end."

There were only veiled mentions of the Watergate scandal in the eulogies. Speakers focused instead on Nixon's foreign policy successes and triumphs over adversity.

"In the conduct of foreign policy, Richard Nixon was one of the seminal presidents," said Henry Kissinger, his secretary of state. He praised him for opening relations with China and pursuing arms negotiations with the Soviet Union even while he was dogged by Watergate.

Kissinger stopped briefly before the casket and saluted his former boss with a brief nod of the head.

By the thousands, ordinary Americans had stood in lines up to five kilometers long in rain, hail and nighttime chill to pay final respects to Nixon.

The mahogany coffin, resting on a pedestal in the library built to keep alive his memory, was surrounded by a sea of flowers.

Library officials estimated 42,000 people passed by the bier, some waiting up to eight hours.

Eighty-eight nations sent delegations. China's included a vice premier and Russia's a deputy prime minister.

The Rev. Billy Graham, who often led Nixon in prayer at the White House and comforted him in his fall from power, was the officiant.

The president's men gather one last time

News agencies

YORBA LINDA, Calif. – All the president's men did not show up for Richard Nixon's funeral, but a number of Watergate-era figures were on hand Wednesday.

While President Clinton made the eulogizers' case for considering Nixon a flawed American hero rather than a political villain, the presence of invited guests like G. Gordon Liddy and Charles Colson – names steeped in Watergate lore – helped keep the flame of scandal alive.

"It was like a rogues' gallery from the Watergate days out there," said one funeral organizer.

Among those at the center of attention was Liddy, the bald-headed former White House aide who kept a stoic silence and served over 52 months in prison for his role in the Watergate break-in at the Democratic Party national headquarters during the 1972 presidential campaign.

Harried aides rushed Liddy toward a bus, but television crews and reporters blocked the former Nixon operative's path, peppering him with questions about Watergate.

Liddy pointed an accusatory finger. "It was a John Dean operation," he declared.

All of a sudden, on an unseasonably chilly April day, the spirit of 1973 surfaced at the Richard M. Nixon Library and Birthplace.

Dean, the former White House counsel who became the chief witness against Nixon in congressional hearings, has consistently denied any role in the burglary itself. He was not among the guests.

Also in attendance was:

- Charles Colson, Nixon's former special counsel who masterminded political "dirty tricks" and kept the White House's infamous "enemies list." He served 207 days in prison for obstruction of justice.
- Alexander Butterfield, the White House communications expert who first told the world about the taping system that prompted Nixon's downfall.
- Howard Baker, the former Republican senator from Tennessee who asked the Watergate-era question that echoed far beyond the hearing room – "What did the president know and when did he know it?"
- Rose Mary Woods, who once said she may have erased parts of secretly taped and potentially incriminating recordings while stretching to answer a telephone.

All were players in a drama that gripped a nation and forever changed the way Americans view politics and the press.

But, at the funeral, there was none of the anger and bitterness that marked that period. The mood was congenial. Handshakes were the order of the day. With the exception of Liddy's remarks, the Class of '73 appeared bent on forgiving and forgetting. Liddy was seen chatting with Baker.

"I'm frankly surprised at my own reaction all week. I thought it a warming experience," said George McGovern, the Democrat who lost his bid to unseat Nixon in 1972. "His career was so intertwined with my own at various times that it is a sense of loss."

Spiro Agnew said he "was glad to come and pay my respects." Agnew resigned as Nixon's first vice president in 1973 after pleading no contest to a charge of cheating on his income taxes in the face of a federal bribery investigation.

"I decided after 20 years of resentment to put it all aside," Agnew told The New York Times before the funeral.

The last time he talked to Nixon was the day he resigned as vice president.

"He tried to call me after that, several times, but I didn't take the calls because at the time, I felt totally abandoned, but that's all past," Agnew told the Times.

First lady Hillary Rodham Clinton, who accompanied husband President Clinton to the funeral, had a distant link to Watergate.

In early 1974, as a recent Yale Law School graduate, she was hired as a lawyer for the House Judiciary Committee staff considering impeachment proceedings against Nixon. But Nixon resigned when impeachment seemed all but certain.

Other Nixon-era attendees included Alexander Haig, who served as Nixon's chief of staff during his final days; Charles "Bebe" Rebozo, a wealthy Nixon aide and confidant; and Elliot Richardson, a Nixon attorney general, who resigned rather than fire Watergate prosecutor Archibald Cox.

And lest anyone doubt for a moment whether Nixon at last found peace after a turbulent life, consider a sign visible to the Clinton motorcade.

"President Nixon," the sign read. "No more news media. You truly are in heaven."

WORLD BRIEFS

Yeltsin pact signed amid pomp

MOSCOW (Reuter) – President Boris Yeltsin, invoking the spectre of civil war, launched a non-binding political peace pact yesterday with much pomp and ceremony but doubtful significance.

Ultra-nationalist leader Vladimir Zhirinovsky joined more than 200 politicians, religious and regional representatives in a glittering Kremlin signing ceremony shown live on television.

But the Communists and their Agrarian allies in the State Duma, the lower house of parliament, followed Yeltsin's hardline extra-parliamentary foes in rejecting the Treaty on Social Accord in which signatories renounce the use of force for political ends.

Japan PM tries to calm jitters

TOKYO (Reuter) – New Prime Minister Tsutomu Hata formed Japan's first minority government cabinet in four decades yesterday and tried to calm jitters about his chances of staying in power.

Hata, while popular with voters, appears doomed to lead a short-term government after failing to mend his ruling coalition and restore its parliamentary majority.

Britain: Iran aiding IRA

LONDON (AP) – Britain accused Iran of helping the Irish Republican Army in its violent campaign over Northern Ireland and demanded yesterday that the contacts cease.

British officials gave no details of any direct support, but both sides in Northern Ireland's long-running conflict have looked abroad for arms, explosives and cash.

Berlusconi picked for gov't

ROME (AP) – Media magnate Silvio Berlusconi received approval go-ahead yesterday to try to form the first conservative government in Italy's postwar history.

Earlier in the day, President Oscar Luigi Scalfaro indicated that he would tap Berlusconi for the post of prime minister.

The move comes after two years of political corruption scandals swept away more than four decades of centrist governments dominated by Christian Democrats.

Protestant gunmen kill two more

BELFAST (Reuter) – Protestant extremists killed their second Catholic victim in 12 hours in Northern Ireland on Wednesday, prompting charges by a Catholic politician that his constituents were being shot "as if they were rats."

Joe Hendron called for an end to a spiral of sectarian bloodshed that has taken eight lives in nine days, the worst violence since Britain and Ireland launched a new plan last December to end the province's 25-year conflict.

Sheikh sentenced to 7 years

CAIRO (Reuter) – An Egyptian court yesterday sentenced in his absence blind Moslem fundamentalist sheikh Omar Abdel Rahman, who awaits trial in the United States for plotting the bombing of New York's World Trade Center.

The court sentenced Abdel Rahman to seven years hard labor for inciting a riot and attempting to kill two policemen in 1989.

Troops clash in Yemen

SAN'A, Yemen (Reuter) – Rival army units in Yemen battled with tanks and artillery yesterday and the deputy premier was wounded by assassins who killed three of his bodyguards.

Political sources said Deputy Prime Minister Hassan Makki, a key ally of President Ali Abdullah Saleh, was attacked by gunmen as he left a party meeting in the capital San'a.

Iraqis mark Saddam's birthday

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) – Government-organized festivities yesterday marked the 57th birthday of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

By early evening, there was no indication Saddam had surfaced at any of the celebrations in his honor. The last time Saddam was seen in public was April 4, when he attended a music festival just outside Baghdad.

Memorial for NY hassid

NEW YORK (AP) – The mother of the hassid killed when a gunman opened fire on a van on the Brooklyn Bridge last month urged people yesterday to "do an act of goodness and kindness" in his honor. She spoke at a memorial service at City Hall marking what would have been the 17th birthday of Ari Halberstam tomorrow.

Gordon's buzzer-beater burns Hap TA

ARYEH DEAN COHEN

HAPOEL Tel Aviv's hopes of clinching a berth in the National Basketball League finals went up in smoke last night when Adi Gordon hit a last-second jumper to give Hapoel Jerusalem an 82-81 Lag ba'Omer miracle victory.

The scintillating shot tied the series 2-2, a fitting end to a barnburner that sent the clubs back to Ussishkin for the deciding contest Sunday night.

Gordon, Jerusalem's captain who has been suffering the effects of mononucleosis all season, gave Tel Aviv the kiss of death with his jumper from the right, sending 3,000 fans rushing onto the court to celebrate.

But it was Mickey Berkowitz, Mr. Clutch, who also deserved their kisses. He saved the day for Jerusalem, although early on, no one would have expected it. Berkowitz, limited to one point until late in the game, saved his best for last, scoring an astounding 13 points in the last 2:55 to pull Jerusalem's coals out of the fire.

Jerusalem, denied a Game 3 victory in Tel Aviv Monday night when they lost an 89-87 heartbreaker, just wouldn't quit last night, even with Norris Coleman scoring only 13 points.

Trailing 22-6 with 9:50 left in the first half, they roared back behind Gordon and Danny Gott to get back into it and were down only 33-30 at halftime.

Using a three-guard offense for much of the game, Coach Yoram Harush rotated Gordon, Gott, Papi Turgeman and Berkowitz as Jerusalem gamely hung in despite a stellar second half performance by David Thirdkill (17 points, 26 overall). A 3-pointer by The Sheriff with 3:25 left gave Tel Aviv a seemingly insurmountable 73-67 lead.

Enter Mickey, practically invisible until then. With 2:55 left, he suddenly popped in a three, stole the ball and raced for a lay-up that cut it to 73-72. Nano Markovic calmly hit two foul shots to up Tel Aviv's lead to three before Mickey got Thirdkill out of the game with his 5th foul. The Sheriff hitting Berkowitz on a three-point attempt.

Mr. Clutch nailed all three foul shots, tying it at 75. Nano, fouled again, hit two more, but Mickey wasn't done. He drilled another three to put Jerusalem up by one and the crowd in 7th heaven.

After Tomer Steinhauer hit two foul shots, Mickey showed his poise by hitting two of his own, and Jerusalem had an 80-79 lead with 13 ticks on the clock. Nano clicked twice just after some Tel Aviv players jostled Gordon while the players lined up.

Jerusalem was down 81-80, and Gordon was out for sweet revenge. He raced downcourt, stopped, popped, and shot Tel Aviv's lights out.

For Jerusalem, Gott, who was hot inside and outside (four 3s) had 19, Gordon 15 and Berkowitz 14 in a game that will long be remembered in the capital.

TA derby center of soccer action

ORI LEWIS

THE Tel Aviv derby is the center of action in this week's round of National League soccer matches.

Tomorrow's derby could also be a dress rehersal of the State Cup final. After the draw for the semifinals of the State Cup was made last night it was determined that Maccabi Tel Aviv will meet Hapoel Holon and Hapoel Tel Aviv will take on Maccabi Petah Tikva. Both matches will be played at Ramat Gan on May 17th.

The two Tel Aviv sides meet at the National Stadium in Ramat Gan and host Maccabi, which still has League and State Cup double hopes – and a possible further meeting with its arch-rivals in the State Cup final – know they cannot afford anything less than a win tomorrow if they are to continue keeping up the pressure on leaders Maccabi Haifa.

But Maccabi knows that recent tradition is on it side, at least. Over the past four seasons, the team has not lost to Hapoel. The boys in red, however, are playing their best soccer of the season and despite their 3-2 loss to Haifa last week, Hapoel will be in high spirits ahead of tomorrow's 6 pm kick-off. Maccabi, for its part, is not that hot, they only managed a last-gasp win over Maccabi Netanya last weekend.

Haifa hosts Hapoel Petah Tikva in a match which on paper, at least, should not pose too many problems for the leaders.

In other action, third-placed Betar Jerusalem will be looking to avenge its 5-1 humiliation by Hapoel Holon. But it won't be easy for the Jerusalemites, who are still serving a three-match radius punishment and will have to play this encounter at Ramat Gan instead of Teddy Stadium.

This weekend's National League fixtures: Hapoel Haifa vs. Maccabi Petah Tikva, Kiryat Eliezer, today at 4:30 pm; Ironi Ashdod vs. Bnei Yehuda, Ashdod, tomorrow, 6 pm; Hapoel Kfar Sava vs. Maccabi Herzliya, Kfar Sava, today 4:30 pm; Maccabi Haifa vs. Hapoel Petah Tikva, Kiryat Eliezer, tomorrow 6 pm; Maccabi Tel Aviv vs. Hapoel Tel Aviv, Ramat Gan, tomorrow, 6 pm; Hapoel Beersheba vs. Maccabi Netanya, Beersheba, tomorrow, 4:30 pm; Betar Jerusalem vs. Hapoel Holon, Ramat Gan, tomorrow, 4 pm.

Man Utd is sitting pretty

INSIDE ENGLISH SOCCER

LEN BREWER

WE head into the penultimate weekend of the season with Manchester United needing only four points from their remaining games to retain their Premier League championship. On Wednesday, United put itself firmly in the driver's seat when goals from Kanchelskie and Giggs earned them a 2-0 win at Leeds.

Second-place Blackburn won 2-1 at West Ham on the same night to keep their hopes alive, but having played a game more than their Lancashire rivals, the Premier League trophy looks set to remain at Old Trafford.

On Sunday, United is away to Ipswich and it will be a major surprise if they fail to collect all the points against a team that has lost six of its last eight games.

Also on Wednesday, third-place Newcastle United boosted its hopes of a place in next season's UEFA Cup when it opened up a three-point gap on fourth-place Arsenal. They hammered Aston Villa 5-1 while the Gunners drew 1-1 at Queen's Park Rangers. Andy Cole broke the Geordies all-time scoring record with his 40th goal of the season.

Arsenal plays West Ham at Highbury tomorrow before flying to Denmark in preparation for Tuesday's Cup Winners Cup final against Parma in Copenhagen.

FA Cup finalists Chelsea ended its relegation worries on Wednesday with a 2-0 win over Swindon.

Swindon is already down, but which teams will likely accompany it into the First Division will not be known until the very last kick of the season. Oldham and Sheffield United occupy the other relegation places. But Ipswich, despite being four points clear, looks certain to be dragged into the mire. Apart from facing Manchester United this weekend, the East Anglian side wraps up its season in eight days, at home to Blackburn.

Oldham, which entertains Sheffield Wednesday tomorrow, must be cursing its luck. Their Norwegian international defender Gunnar Halle will miss the remainder of the season after cracking a rib in Tuesday's 3-0 defeat at Wimbledon.

Nottingham Forest kept on course for automatic promotion from the First Division with a 2-0 victory over Derby on Wednesday. Victory at bottom side Peterboro tomorrow will guarantee a quick return to the Premier League.

Sabres defeat Devils 1-0 in wild and wacky marathon match

BUFFALO (Reuter) – The Buffalo Sabres remained alive in their first round playoff series with the New Jersey Devils but it took nearly seven periods of hockey to score a goal and force a seventh and deciding game.

Dave Hannan scored 5:43 into the fourth sudden death overtime period to end the marathon 1-0 after 125 minutes and 43 seconds of one of the most tense and thrilling goaltending duels in NHL history.

Hannan picked up a loose puck and snapped a backhand over over a sprawled Martin Brodeur to end a game that began on Wednesday night and ended yesterday morning with the Sabres' playoff hopes alive and well.

Hannan's goal, his first in the playoffs, came on the Sabres' only shot of the fourth overtime.

Brodeur and Buffalo goaltender Dominik Hasek combined for 119 saves in a game filled with dozens of spectacular stops and breathtaking near-misses.

Hasek stopped a whopping 70 shots on goal, many of which appeared to be sure game winners. Brodeur, equally brilliant, stopped 49 of 50 Buffalo shots on goal.

Weizman, Liba'i clash over criteria for pardons

BATSHEVA TSUR and EVELYN GORDON

PRESIDENT Ezer Weizman yesterday declared he would enforce extremely severe criteria in commuting sentences, following the Justice Minister David Liba'i's refusal to introduce new legislation on this issue. His statement made public a longstanding behind-the-scenes dispute between the two over clemency.

Commutation for certain crimes, particularly murder and drug trafficking, is not in the public interest, Weizman said. The right to commute should be placed in the hands of a judge, rather than those of the president, he added.

In his first year in office, Weizman has commuted only a handful of cases and many others are said to be awaiting his signature.

Over the past few months, the president had held prolonged discussions on the subject with Liba'i, but the latter rejected his request to initiate new legislation. Liba'i's refusal is said to be based on his fear that, if the issue is brought up in the Knesset, the death sentence would be implemented.

According to law, the president may commute a sentence at the recommendation of the minister. In one recent case, Weizman publicly stated that he had refused to commute the sentence of a drug dealer.

Speaking on a visit to the Jerusalem District Court yesterday, Weizman said: "A judge hands down a life sentence and then sends it to us five, six, 10 years later. Perhaps it will go to the next president. Isn't it better to reassess the legislation and make a judge responsible for deciding when he has all the evidence at his fingertips?"

Later, at the swearing-in ceremony for Supreme Court Justices Dalia Dorner and Zvi Tal, Weizman said: "There are crimes and felonies that are so heinous that my conscience prevents me from commuting them. It is true that the president has the right to be merciful and to grant clemency. But he also has to show public responsibility ... [to think of] the welfare of the general public." Weizman added that he was referring specifically to murder and drug trafficking.

In response, Liba'i warned that Weizman's stand is likely to lead to a Knesset decision to implement the death penalty.

"I consistently fight in the Knesset against any attempt to limit judges' discretionary power by fixing mandatory or minimum sentences in the law," he said. "But I know that if we bring the Knesset an amendment to ease the penalty for murderers, it would be misunderstood. Furthermore, there would be an outcry to reinstate the death penalty, since mandatory life imprisonment for murderers was the alternative to killing them chosen by the legislature," he continued.

Liba'i also said he believes the reasons for a pardon should be made public, so that "no one should say we acted arbitrarily or out of improper considerations."

Liba'i said he recognized that pardons have to be given with great care, to avoid the appearance of political favoritism. However, he said, the solution to this problem was not to refuse giving pardons at all; rather it is to weigh each case carefully on its merits.

Court refuses to order social workers back to work

SASHA SADAN

THE National Labor Court yesterday declined to issuing the restraining order against the strike by the Association of the Social Workers sought by Treasury wage director Shalom Granit. The Union of Local Authorities backed off from its request for the order, and the president of the court, Judge Menahem Goldberg, said the court, therefore, did not have authority to rule on the case.

Goldberg did ask the union to stop the strike for 10 days and enter into immediate and intensive negotiations with the Treasury, but the union, while welcoming immediate negotiations, said it would not accept preconditions.

Union spokesman David Ziso said that the head of the Union of Local Authorities, Karmiel Mayor Adi Eldar, decided to withdraw the request for a restraining order because the social workers are "the lowest paid of all." Eldar could not be reached for comment.

Eli Ben-Gera, head of the 9,000-member union, said the strike will not stop until the social workers have a signed agreement in hand.

In the last few days, 50 emergency calls have come into the union's strike headquarters in Tel Aviv, Ziso said, and the only cases to which social workers have been allowed to respond are those involving situations in which there was danger to the mother or fetus. He said permission was also given to provide help in one or two cases involving a hoped for organ transplant.

Ziso said that the appeals in which the union did not permit intervention included a case in which a 10-year-old was reportedly raped by a stranger, a pregnant 17-year-old who spent the night in jail "for her own good," as it was believed she was about to commit a crime, and a child who came to elementary school with his body covered with bruises. There was reason to believe, Ziso said, that the child is battered at home.

A girl was referred to a psychiatrist after she told a school counselor how she would kill herself if her mother got on her nerves again. The girl's parents are retarded.

Woman dies after court orders life support stopped

JUDY SIEGEL and RAINE MARCUS

EVA Ofri, the stroke victim whose sons persuaded the Tel Aviv District Court earlier this week to allow her gradual disconnection from a respirator, died yesterday at Sheba Hospital.

A hospital spokeswoman said Ofri, 75, had suffered irreversible brain damage and there was no hope for her survival even on a respirator. She was unconscious shortly before her death.

Eitan and Yoram Ofri had argued that in the past their mother had insisted she did not wish to live if her life was dependent on machines.

Eva Ofri had been hospitalized at Sheba since she suffered a stroke in February. Last month, she suffered heart failure, which resulted in brain damage when oxygen did not reach her brain for five minutes.

Her sons said their mother had only agreed to be on life-support machines as a temporary measure.

The spokeswoman said Sheba had an ethics committee to recommend action in such cases, but hospital policy did not allow disconnecting respirators without a court order.

Peled: Police won't bargain with Meshulam

RAINE MARCUS

POLICE will not negotiate with self-styled rabbi Uzi Meshulam, who has been holed up in his Yehud fortress for over a month.

Although they have several plans to deal with Meshulam and his armed followers, police still want to "finish the affair without bloodshed," said outgoing Inspector-General Rafi Peled yesterday at a farewell party given by Tel Aviv police reporters.

Meshulam, who left the house for a short time to visit the nearby police command post Wednesday, is still the object of round-the-clock surveillance and his every move is photographed.

Yesterday, armed with two pistols and accompanied by followers carrying submachine guns, he left the house and walked around the neighborhood, without being stopped by police.

Rabin: If Russian aliya continues to drop, funding will be reassessed

DAVID MAKOVSKY

IMMIGRATION from Russia is dwindling, and Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin suggested that if this trend continues, funding will need to be reassessed.

"There is a drop [in immigration from] the main centers of Russia," Rabin told reporters accompanying him on his just-completed visit to Russia. "I sense from conversations with Russians there have been rays of economic hope. This may influence events. Things are in process, they have not stabilized ... We have to see how things develop, and then we can summarize things at the end of the year."

According to Jewish Agency analysts, there were 17,000 immigrants from Russian urban areas last year, and if the current pace continues, there will be about 12,000 this year. Another 5,000 or so are expected from the rural Caucasus Mountain region. During the heyday of Russian immigration, professionals from Moscow and Leningrad came. "Now these people are too cosmopolitan to come to Israel," a senior Jewish Agency official said.

Dr. Baruch Gur, who tracks immigration for the agency, said he expects overall immigration to drop from 69,191 in 1993 to about 50,000 this year, in comparison to 185,227 in 1990. While the backbone of the immigration in the past came from Russia, now the bulk is coming from small towns in the western half of economically distressed Ukraine. Gur estimates that about half of this year's immigration will come from Ukraine.

The striking change in the profile of immigration was brought home during Rabin's encounter with immigrants on his flight home. The plane took off from Kiev, but made a stop in St. Petersburg to pick up Rabin and more immigrants.

In his introduction of Rabin at Moscow's main synagogue, Rabbi Pinhas Goldstein called for more investment in Jewish education and Jewish communal structures in Russia as part of a long-term effort to bolster aliya. He said a more Russian Jews are going to the US and Germany than to Israel.

Haim Chessler, head of the Jewish Agency operation in the former Soviet republics and based in Moscow, said that in response to the dropping numbers of immigrants, the organization has already devoted more of its $36 million budget to Jewish education and summer youth programs.

Gur said that if the number of Russian immigrants does not increase, funding for Jewish education in Russia would increase.

One avenue for enhanced Jewish education that Rabin likes is the 12 schools in the former Soviet Union jointly sponsored by Israel's Ministry of Education and local authorities, which have some 2,500 students.

After speaking to 600 schoolchildren and their parents in St. Petersburg at the newly inaugurated Makif school on Wednesday, Rabin told Israeli reporters he hopes the creation of more Jewish schools in Russia would be a future trend. "It was unimaginable just a few years ago that the Russian authorities would set up a school in joint sponsorship with Israel, with them donating and refurbishing a building," Rabin said. "It is an amazing precedent that I hope could be used in different places in the world and in Russia. Such institutions could preserve the Jewishness of Jews as well as help bring them to Israel."

Beduin jailed for trying to kill mother

YIGAL KOTZER

A BEDUIN man was sentenced yesterday by the Haifa District Court to eight years' imprisonment, plus three suspended, for trying to murder his mother and her lover.

Munir Katish, 24, of Kafr Julis was found guilty of shooting his mother and her lover when they came to the village for a visit.

Fifteen years ago, Katish's mother abandoned her husband and seven children and ran off with her lover, a neighbor, who also left seven children and a wife behind. The couple moved to Usfiya, on the Carmel.

When Katish was 15, he found a Czech submachine gun in the village, with which he determined to kill his mother and her lover.

Man gets two-day jail sentence for beating horse

RAINE MARCUS

A MAN who flogged his sick horse until it had to be destroyed was sentenced to two days' imprisonment by Tel Aviv Magistrates Court yesterday.

Judge Nira Lidsky also activated a six month suspended jail sentence pending against Kobi Cohen, 39, who will now serve six months and two days.

Cohen beat his horse to such an extent a veterinarian had to destroy it, the court heard. He had bought it so cheaply he should have realized it was not in good health, said Lidsky. The horse was undernourished and did not receive proper medical treatment, he said.

"Let the Animals Live" spokesman Eti Altman said after the hearing she was disappointed with the sentence, which she said "justifies violence against animals."

"I would like to see those convicted of violent acts against animals go to prison for a few years," said a tearful Altman. "Many violent crimes against people start with abuse to animals."

Cohen's lawyer Maxim Attias argued that his client had suffered from shell shock and was since mentally disturbed.

In passing sentence Judge Lidsky said that "while human beings are in a position to defend themselves, animals are helpless and suffer abuse in silence."

"In the times of our forefathers there were rules which applied to animals that assisted man in his work," said Lidsky. "This defendant did not show any feelings or pity towards his horse."
